[1] The Pakistani Government received the Sitara-e-Imtiaz award on March 23, 2019 and the Performance Pride Award in 1991. In 2011, he took part in Coke Studio (season 4) and sang two songs, Ni Oothaan Waale and Pyaar Naal. In September 2017, she made her second start at Coke Studio (season 10) and performed Sab Maya Hai in her traditional loving voice. Esakhelvi was born Attaullah Khan Niazi in Esa Kheil, Punjab, Pakistan. Niazi is a populous Pashtun tribe in Pakistan's north-western Punjab province and eastern parts of Afghanistan. Attaullah was not interested in music as a child, but music was strictly forbidden in his home. [2] [3] Attaullah secretly tried to learn more about music, even as restrictions were imposed on music in his home. [2] The school teacher taught him songs by Mohammed Rafi and Mukesh and told him never to stop singing. Attaullah tried to explain his passion for music to his family and persuaded them to sing, but they banned him from continuing to sing. [2] Disappointed, Attaullah left home when he was 18. [2] He traveled extensively in Pakistan and supported himself by working from Mianwali. It is most popular in rural areas of Pakistan and in some other countries around the world. He continued his music career after leaving the Esakhelvi family home and often recorded himself on tapes he later distributed. [2] In 1972, Esakhelvi was invited to perform at Radio Pakistan, Bahawalpur. That same year, he gave a concert in Mianwali. [4] In 1973, Esakhelvi made his television show Neelam Ghar. He was invited by a company in Faisalabad to record folk songs in their studio and recorded four albums in a recording session. [2] The albums were released at the end of 1977 and made the national bestseller list. [2] In 1980, Esakhelvi made his UK debut. It was also his first concert abroad. Their album was eventually released in the UK under various labels, including Hi-tech, and Moviebox. He performed the song of Sadiq (the famous poet of Saraiki) by Mian Mohammed Bakhsh, Saiful Maluk and Bulleh Shah by Keey Mr. Dardan Sang Yaree.He. Attaullah Khan visited India in 2014. The Times of India wrote: Ibaadat, a Sufi concert with the Navbharat Times, was recently held in Purana Quila in the capital. Pakistani folk singer Attaullah Khan made his debut in Delhi, Khan sang his Achha Sila Diya Tune Mere Pyaar Ka and other Pakistani Sufi hits for the audience. The concert was organized by the AAS group, an NGO working to raise awareness among women about cervical cancer and spread ways to prevent it, and it was organized to spread the message. [5] Attaullah Khan's hometown is from Mianwali. He received his first education from Esakhel. He is traditionally considered a Saraiki artist. Attaullah moved to Lahore after becoming a professional musician in Saraiki, Urdu and English. He is married four times and has four children. His daughter Laraib Atta is a professional VFX artist who has worked on many Hollywood films. [6] [7] His son, Sanwal Esakhelvi, also pursued a career in music,[8] while another son, Bilawal, was a musician and an actor and director based in London. [10] Legacy is considered a folk icon in his home country and is considered one of the most popular singers in his history. They are lilting melodies of Attaullah Khan Esakhelvi, a constant friend of Pakistani truck drivers. This Mianwali-born vocalist was the poster boy for traditional Pakistani music with his swashbuckler mustache, kameez shalwar and a shoulder shawl. [8] His passionate songs, which sang in Saraiki, dominated by western and southern Punjab, were captured almost like wildfires from the moment he recorded his first session on Radio Pakistan Bahawalpur radio in the mid-1970s. For years, Esakhelvi reigned supreme and unchallenged in a universe that got parallel to elite cultured music halls. [11] In 1991, the Government of Pakistan awarded him the Pride of Performance Award. He was also awarded the Sitara e Imtiaz award on March 23, 2019. [12] He recorded more than 50,000 songs in seven languages. [8] Queen of Great Britain II.
